

JOBS FOR ANY MAJOR

A liberal arts degree is designed to produce an educated person who can solve problems, analyze situations from multiple perspectives and communicate well. It does not always train a person to perform a specific job. In fact, many employers want to hire degreed or educated people and train those people themselves. There are numerous, good jobs that just require a degree and no specific major. So, if you want to study a subject that does not have a clear career connection, there will be still be plenty of jobs available to you. You will, however, need to take the time to research and identify them.

To give you a start, 20 examples are listed below. These jobs were obtained from public job boards or employer websites in the spring semester of 2020 and are primarily located in northeast or central Ohio. They are only a sampling of what is out there. They were selected to demonstrate the diversity of employers and job types available to college degree holders. These jobs are 1) entry level, 2) require or prefer a bachelor's degree with any major, and 3) require experience, similar to the amount and type that a student would possess. In short, these are real jobs for which most new graduates would qualify!
