“Compass
commits the University
to extend and cement
Mount’s leadership
position
in the Midwest.”

Dear friends,

At their recent fall meeting, the University’s trustees approved Compass 2021: Mount Union’s Plan to Lead, Collaborate, and Innovate. This Board action culminated a yearlong process involving hundreds of people assessing the challenges and opportunities facing Mount Union. Approved by the University’s senior administrators, faculty, and the Board, Compass 2021 commits the University to a number of strategies designed to, over the next five years, extend and cement Mount’s leadership position among colleges and universities in the Midwest.

First and foremost, the plan calls for the preservation of the University’s great strengths: excellent academic programs, close interaction with outstanding faculty members, and co-curricular experiences that encourage engagement and personal growth. I am excited that Mount Union will be fostering a global perspective and taking a number of steps to strengthen programs that focus on leadership development. We will be deploying technology in innovative ways to more effectively engage our students and to amplify the reach, impact, and visibility of the University in our region and around the world.

Compass 2021 also responds to the affordability challenge facing higher education today. The plan will energize collaborative efforts to control costs, increase non-tuition revenue, and reach and serve new populations of students. These efforts will be combined with active work seeking new gifts to significantly increase the University’s endowment for scholarship and financial aid support for our students.

More information about Compass 2021 is on the following page. I look forward to working with you to advance the goals of the plan and to build a brighter future together.

Thanks for all you do for Mount Union!

Best regards,

Dick

MOUNT UNION'S STRATEGY TO LEAD, COLLABORATE, AND INNOVATE

The University of Mount Union has a long and storied history of adapting for success. In every era, it has been active in sensing the needs of the time and working to meet those needs. Today's challenges – concerns about affordability, doubts about the value of a college degree, evolving learning styles, changing student demographics – will summon Mount Union's traditional strengths: steadfastness in facing difficulties, inventiveness in meeting society's needs, and an instinct for inclusion and service to others that expands the institution's reach and impact. Committed to leadership, collaboration, and innovation, Mount Union promises to prepare students for exceptional futures.

In December 2015, the University concluded Advancing Excellence, an ambitious and successful five-year strategic plan. At that time, the University began collaborative work to create a new strategic plan that would build upon those recent successes. After months of work, and with input from hundreds of members of the University community, the Strategic Planning Steering Committee proposed Compass 2021: Mount Union's Strategy to Lead, Collaborate, and Innovate. The plan was approved by the faculty and Board of Trustees in the fall of 2016.

"The plan balances aspiration – we want to be ambitious for the University's future – with realism. A plan isn't valuable if it isn't implemented, but it's also not valuable if it doesn't stretch us," said Dick Merriman, president of the University. "Given the very dynamic environment in which Mount Union operates, it is not feasible to state with great certainty that Mount Union will be executing specific steps five years from now. Instead, the plan articulates a number of key goals for the University – our compass – that will guide our work over the next five years."

Compass 2021 focuses on six initiatives:

- Cultivate an innovative and expanding academic environment

- Ensure financial strength, affordability, and enrollment success
- Enrich the experience of an increasingly-diverse student body
- Brand the University as a remarkable Midwestern institution
- Create an effective and collaborative workplace culture
- Leverage existing and emerging technology

The impact of Compass 2021 on the University's future will be evident as efforts to raise endowed funds to support scholarships and academic programs take center stage in the University's fund raising efforts. Past Mount Union capital campaigns have focused on significant facilities projects, but an upcoming capital campaign will shift attention to building the endowment for scholarships. In addition, Mount Union will seek to annually secure gifts totaling $100,000 to $200,000 for a student rescue fund designed to help upperclassmen complete their studies and earn degrees.

"The rising cost of college and increasing student debt are top concerns for today's families," said Merriman. "Both are significant hurdles for our undergraduate students, and even more so for the substantial number of first-generation students we welcome each year."

"The campaign will focus on affordability, the quality of our programs, and the leadership of our students and alumni," said Greg King '89, vice president for advancement. "Through the continued loyalty of our supporters, we will be poised to further enhance the Mount Union experience and ensure that it is accessible to students of all backgrounds."

Alumni and friends will have other opportunities to support the plan as well. The University plans to put a spotlight on campus-wide programs that encourage the development of leaders, which will require a growing network of individuals and organizations that can provide internship, shadowing, and networking opportunities. Alumni and friends will also be asked to help with efforts to grow Mount Union's visibility and recruit new students in key geographic areas.

"The loyalty of our alumni and friends is a great strength of Mount Union," said King. "I have no doubt that, as we work to implement our new strategic plan and launch a campaign, our supporters will once again step up to the plate to offer their time, talent, and treasure in support of the institution and our students." ■

TALKING POINTS

KAREEM ABDUL-JABBAR TO PRESENT SCHOOLER LECTURE

Mount Union is proud to announce that Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Famer, six-time NBA champion and three-time NCAA champion Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will present the annual Schooler Lecture on Tuesday, April 4, 2017 in the Timken Gymnasium of the McPherson Academic and Athletic Complex.

The NBA's all-time leading scorer, who regularly contributes as a columnist to The Washington Post and Time Magazine, recently released the New York Times best-selling book Writings on the Wall - Searching for a New Equality Beyond Black and White. The book offers Abdul-Jabbar's personal perspectives on political issues facing America today. Abdul-Jabbar was one of 21 recipients of this year's Presidential Medal of Freedom, awarded by President Barack Obama.

At the Schooler Lecture, Abdul-Jabbar will present "It's All about the Rebound," during which he'll discuss his life successes and the many challenging obstacles he had to overcome along the way including racism; criticism from the press and his peers; anti-Muslim sentiment; professional struggles as an NBA player, coach, and television commentator; and being taken seriously as a writer. Each of these obstacles was overcome through discipline, perseverance, patience, and some harsh introspection.

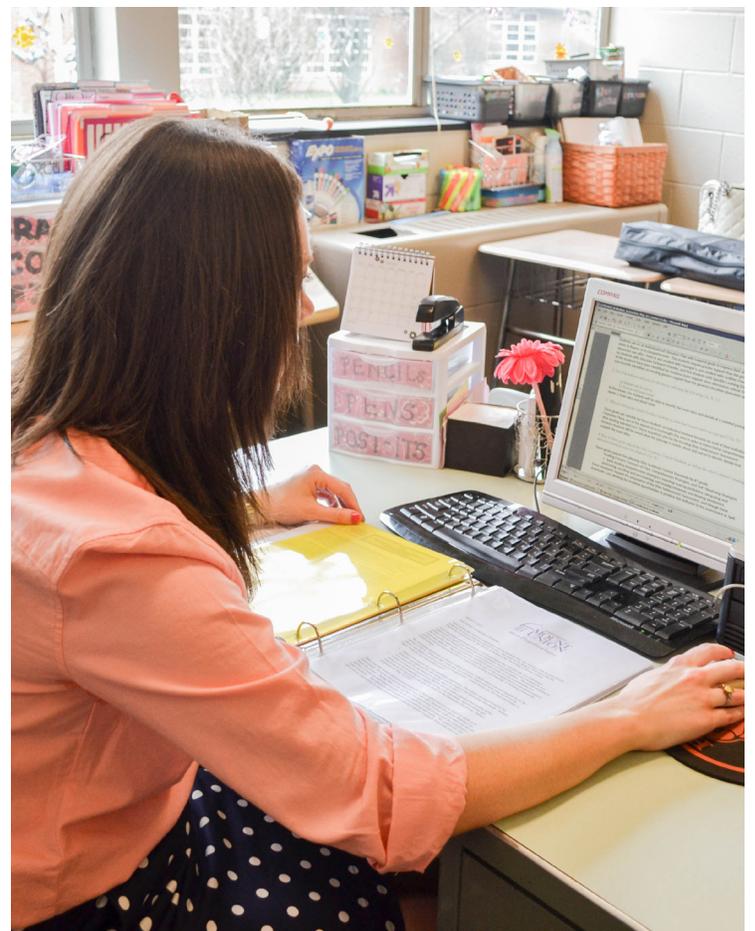

To reserve complimentary tickets for the lecture, call (330) 829-6120 or visit mountunion.edu/schooler-3.

MAEL PROGRAM UNVEILS ONLINE-EXCLUSIVE DEGREE

For the first time in its academic history, the University of Mount Union is offering a completely online degree through its Master of Arts in Educational Leadership (MAEL) Program.

The MAEL Program has been approved by the Ohio Department of Higher Education and the Higher Learning Commission. The program, which is completing its fifth year at the University, has been rooted in online learning throughout its time at Mount Union. Transitioning to a completely online program provides flexibility for working professionals hoping to continue their education.

"Mount Union's M.A. in Educational Leadership Program maintains personal connections between faculty and students through an active online community," said Dr. Mandy (Geddis '98) Capel, associate professor of education and director of the MAEL Program. The program is currently accepting applications with rolling acceptance until April 30. Mount Union alumni receive a five percent discount off of tuition.

PHYSICAL THERAPY ENROLLS FIRST CLASS, RECEIVES CANDIDACY FOR ACCREDITATION

The Doctor of Physical Therapy Program at Mount Union has received candidate for accreditation status from the Commission on Accreditation in Physical Therapy (CAPTE). It also secured approval from the Higher Learning Commission and authorization from the Ohio Department of Higher Education. The program enrolled its inaugural class of 26 students in the fall of 2016.

“The body of work completed for CAPTE allows us to enroll students and have confidence in knowing we will prepare them to be great physical therapists,” said Dr. Robert Frampton, director, associate professor, and chair of the Department of Physical Therapy.

MOUNT UNION CHOIR REUNION CELEBRATED DURING ALUMNI WEEKEND AND HOMECOMING

More than 50 classes were represented at the Mount Union choir reunion that was held this past October. This year also marked the 50th reunion for the 1966 World Choir Tour. In celebration of the reunions and alumni returning to campus, several events were held, including the reunion itself, a performance during the annual Alumni Brunch, and a worship service honoring the alumni who passed away in 2016.

This reunion provided choir alumni, many of whom traveled from across the country, with the opportunity to celebrate with current members of the Mount Union choir, reunite with friends, and share their stories of the love they have for Mount Union and their days in the choir.

MOUNT UNION SEEKS CANDIDATES FOR VPAA

The University of Mount Union invites nominations and expressions of interest as it begins its search for a new vice president for academic affairs and dean of the University (VPAA and dean).

The VPAA and dean serves as the chief academic officer and is responsible for Mount Union's educational mission and academic program. In fulfilling this role, the VPAA and dean serves as the leader and advocate for the academic program and faculty, as a key member of the President's Council, and as chief liaison officer to the Academic Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees. In addition to oversight of all academic departments and programs, the VPAA and dean oversees key administrative areas.

This search comes as the result of a change in position for Dr. Patricia Draves, current VPAA and dean, who will transition to a new role at Mount Union as vice president for strategic initiatives and academic advancement. In this position, she will be focusing on efforts to launch Compass 2021: Mount Union's Strategy to Lead, Collaborate, and Innovate and helping with fund raising initiatives for the plan.

Nominations and expressions of interest should be sent electronically to: Scott Mason, professor of chemistry and director of the pre-medical and pre-health professions program, and Michelle Sundstrom, vice president for enrollment management, co-chairs, VPAA and Dean of the University Search Committee, University of Mount Union at: UMU@agbsearch.com. This search is being assisted by: Loren Anderson, Ph.D., senior consultant, AGB Search, cell: (253) 223-3566, lja@agbsearch.com.

Please visit agbsearch.com/current-searches/senior-executive to view more information about this position. To ensure full consideration, all materials should be received by January 31, 2017.

MOUNT UNION RANKED A TOP COLLEGE BY U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT FOR 26TH CONSECUTIVE YEAR

The University of Mount Union was ranked as a top college by U.S. News and World Report for the 26th consecutive year. This year, Mount Union was ranked 10th among Midwest Regional Colleges – a category that includes institutions from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

The University was also ranked ninth among Midwest Regional Colleges as a U.S. News and World Report “Great School, Great Price” institution. This calculation, according to U.S. News and World Report, “takes into account the school’s academic quality, based on its ‘Best Colleges’ ranking, and the 2015-16 net cost of attendance for a student who received the average level of need-based financial aid. The higher the quality of program and the lower the cost, the better the deal.”

MOUNT UNION FEATURED IN THE PRINCETON REVIEW’S GUIDE TO 361 GREEN COLLEGES: 2016 EDITION

This year, the University of Mount Union was listed in the Princeton Review as one of the 361 most environmentally-responsible colleges in the country. The Princeton Review chose the schools for this seventh annual edition of its “green guide” based on data from the company’s 2015-16 survey of hundreds of four-year colleges concerning the schools’ commitments to the environment and sustainability.

The profiles in the Princeton Review’s Guide to 361 Green Colleges provide information about each school’s admission requirements, cost, financial aid, and student body. They also include “Green Facts” about the schools with details on the availability of transportation alternatives at the schools and the percentage of the school food budgets spent on local/organic food.

“We are pleased that we continue to receive high marks from U.S. News and World Report for quality among our peers in the Midwest. Given concerns about the cost of higher education, it is particularly exciting to have these important rankings highlight the outstanding return on investment we provide to students and their families.”

MOUNT UNION HONORS RETIRED CONGRESSMAN RALPH REGULA WITH 92ND BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

A 92nd birthday celebration to honor retired Congressman Ralph Regula '48 was held Friday, December 2 in Canton, Ohio. The evening featured special guest Senator Rob Portman, a preview of the upcoming PBS documentary of the life and times of Regula, and fellowship with the Regula family. The event raised funds for Mount Union's Ralph and Mary Regula Center for Public Service and Civic Engagement, supporting scholarship initiatives.

The Regula Center works to embody the ideals of Ralph and his wife Mary (Rogusky '49) while supporting the University's mission to prepare students for fulfilling lives, meaningful work, and responsible citizenship. Providing students with experiences that will enhance their time at Mount Union, compliment their classroom learning, and help them develop crucial skills for leading in the future are at the core of the Regula Center.

“DON'T EVER UNDERESTIMATE HOW MANY LIVES YOU CAN TOUCH BY GIVING A HELPING HAND TO A STUDENT IN NEED. THE YOUNG PEOPLE COMING OUT OF COLLEGE TODAY ARE THE FUTURE LEADERS OF OUR WORLD.”

STUDENTS INTERN AT REPUBLICAN, DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTIONS

Five Mount Union students interned at the Republican and Democratic National Conventions (RNC, DNC) in the summer of 2016, prior to the most recent Presidential Election. Sophie Ramsey '19 and Bridget Dennis '17 interned at the DNC in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania while Nic Hendryx '17, Corbin Hershberger '19, and Alex Mills '17 went to Cleveland, Ohio for the RNC.

“Interning for the Democratic National Convention has been the best experience of my life thus far,” stated Dennis. “I gained so many connections through the process and learned a semester’s worth of material in two weeks. I encourage everyone to be more involved in politics, as it can truly be a lot of fun and very rewarding at the same time.”

All five students had this opportunity through The Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars, an independent, nonprofit organization serving hundreds of universities.

Face Your FEARS

Mount Students Calm Anxiety While Riding Roller Coasters
by Dr. Kevin Meyer, Associate Professor of Psychology, Neuroscience and Human Development

As I write this, I am 10 days from arriving at Cedar Point with a bus full of anxiety-filled students who, just eight weeks ago, professed a full-blown phobia of the mechanical wonders they will soon ride for the first time.

As you read this, you can rest assured that those individuals have joined the ranks of hundreds of successful alumni of the Face Your Fear Project, an ensemble of some of the most courageous, hard-working students with whom I have ever had the pleasure of working. Now in its seventh year, this experiential journey brings abnormal psychology to life, and students witness first-hand how anxiety disorders are diagnosed and treated.

Before fall classes begin, the 30 students who signed up for the course are screened to see if they display either an extreme anxiety or phobia of roller coasters. If they do, they are cast into the “participant group” and begin a journey toward freeing themselves from the shackles of their fear. If they don’t, they become part of the “support group,” and play a vital role in their peers’ journey.

You may be wondering how I am so confident in the success of this year’s class. For starters, 83 students have been in the participant group over the past six years, and the success rate is 100 percent. Yes, all 83 students have set goals and found ways to reach them. And yet, like any coach, I will spend hours listening to the voices in my head whisper worry and self-doubt: “Did you do enough?” or “Have they done enough?” With that said, when that anxious noise gets louder, it helps to remind myself that I have learned something invaluable from my students: trust them. Actually, I have learned a lot working with my students over the years.

If you ever find yourself dealing with the boogeyman inside your head, here are two lessons to keep in mind (pun intended).

Be Here, Not There

Next time someone asks you what you are doing today, say, “Not much. Just going to find a quiet place to meditate.” As you walk away, there is a good chance the person will either brush it off as you trying to be funny or wonder where your robe and sandals are, since you have clearly become a monk or joined some hipster cult of pseudo-medicine. If your answer was honest, you are among a growing group that has chosen to tap into a well-researched practice in which anyone can participate at any location.

It is natural for our minds to meander through our pasts and futures. While this is not necessarily a bad thing, anxiety lives in the what-ifs of life. For someone struggling with anxiety, those “what-ifs” often take the form of catastrophic potentials that feed the boogeyman and can set off a vicious cycle. Keeping our minds in the present takes concerted effort, but we reap the benefits when we practice for as little as 15 minutes every day. Our concentration improves, and negative emotional reactivity goes down. We feel happier and more satisfied with our lives. We’re more prone to empathy. We learn better. Our blood pressure drops. Did I mention United States Marines practice it? NFL teams? I could go on, but the bottom line is that, by choosing to insert some mindful meditation into your life, you are taking a huge step toward improving you.

Now that I have you convinced, here is a simple way to get started. It’s a little exercise that everyone involved in the Face Your Fear Project learns on day one:

1. Find a quiet place to sit. Anyone joining you must also be a quiet participant. Relaxing instrumental music is optional, as are Buddhist robes and incense.
2. Take a slow, deep breath, and when you do, make sure your shoulders do not move up or down. In fact, the only part of your body that should move is your abdomen, and it should extend out – way out. This may feel awkward to some people, as many don’t know how to use abdominal breathing. Unless you do it this way, you are not using your lungs to their maximum capacity. So keep practicing!
3. Take a slow, deep breath in to a count of five, and hold it for a couple moments. Next, exhale to the same slow count of five, pressing all of the air you can out of your lungs. Take two normal breaths, then repeat.

4. As you breathe, make an effort to keep focused on your breath. Your mind will wander. That’s OK. It happens to even the most seasoned, mindful meditators. The brain-change happens when you make the choice to not feel guilty or shameful about not being focused 100 percent of the time. No one can. The trick is to keep reminding yourself that these are just thoughts moving through, to mentally wave them goodbye, and make an effort to refocus on your breathing. A non-judgmental mindset (of yourself) is key.

5. Keep this up for 15 minutes every day and give it at least four to six weeks to make an impact. Most people want quick fixes and immediate results, but most quick fixes may not offer lasting relief. Adopting a small lifestyle change like this can have lasting results.

Come Together

A common question about Face Your Fear is, “What do the support students do?” I am convinced that, without the help of this group, the outcome of the project would not be as successful. Students in the support group learn from the other students about how they can help on the day of exposure (the portion that takes place at Cedar Point). They work with them over the eight weeks by conducting interviews about their progress, insights, and experiences. In brief, the groups become something greater than their parts. They are all working toward a common goal, all equally committed to everyone’s success. That sounds an awful lot like family, and it’s precisely the type of support anyone battling anxiety needs. The take home? You don’t have to be in the fight alone, so choose not to be.

So if you happen to feel alone, I promise there are empathetic therapists living amongst you with the knowledge and life mission to be there for you. They listen, ask what type of help someone might need, and sometimes help provide the caring and understanding push needed to get on that roller coaster. Or drive down that highway. Or get on that plane. Or give that speech.

As I write this, there’s a voice in my head whispering that this time I didn’t do enough for my students’ success. But that’s just the anxiety talking, so I’m going to go find a quiet place, meditate, and remember to trust my students. Now where did I put my robe... ■

EDUCATING THROUGH EXPERIENCE

*The Spectrum Education Center
Offers Exceptional Opportunities*

In 2007, just a year after Dr. Kristine Turko became a faculty member at the University of Mount Union, she founded Outreach for Autism, a program that offered students the opportunity to live and work at the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism for 10 weeks over the summer. Sixty-six students have participated in the program since its inception, and more than three-quarters of them have pursued graduate degrees or careers in autism intervention.

Outreach for Autism paved the way for the launch of the Spectrum Education Center at Mount Union in May of 2016. Although the name has changed, the mission remains the same – to provide training and education for those interested in autism intervention and advocacy. The Spectrum Education Center now encompasses student training, community outreach, and professional development.

“The center was developed, in part, to get students who are interested in autism intervention and advocacy experience working in the field before they choose a career path,” Turko explained.

EXCEPTIONAL EXPERIENCE

Marisa Rinaldi '17, a psychology major from Tallmadge, Ohio, divides her internship work between The Arc of Ohio and TWi. Both facilities provide advocacy and support for individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities. These programs work to maximize the independence of these individuals through employment and vocational training.

“I became interested in this program after I took Dr. Turko’s Introduction to Autism class last year,” she said. “It sounded like a great opportunity and an amazing experience.”

Although Rinaldi started her internship focused on a career as a child life specialist, her experience has opened doors to opportunities she may never have considered otherwise. Spectrum interns become keenly aware of the importance of their work and the diversity in the job while learning what they can expect as professionals in the field.

“I am so incredibly happy to have been able to participate in these internships,” she said. “Even though I have only been working with individuals with disabilities for a few months, I have realized that this may be another career path to pursue.”

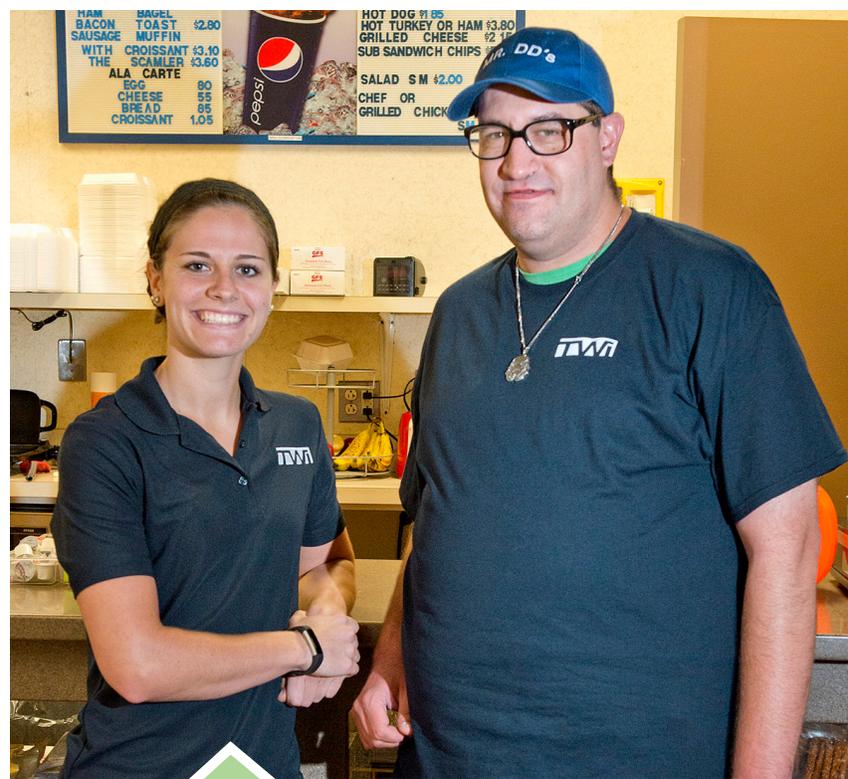

The Spectrum Program Internship provides students with unique perspectives that university courses alone cannot. These intensive, hands-on experiences allow students to see all that a career in the field of disability services offers, from the miraculous to the mundane and everything in between.

“Most students complete the program and know they want to work in the field of disability services, and a small percent realize it’s not for them. Both outcomes are equally important to students’ development in the field and their future goals,” Turko said.

Students who participate in Spectrum’s Internship Program work at a clinical site 24 hours per week while completing courses specifically designed for the program. The courses focus on the fundamentals of working with individuals with developmental disabilities. Students investigate professional research on best practice in disability services and compare the theory to what they experience in their daily work.

Turko has built relationships with several local institutions, including the Cleveland Clinic, Golden Key Center for Exceptional Children, The Arc of Ohio, GentleBrook, The Workshops, Inc. (TWi), and more.

“This semester, we have three students enrolled in the Spectrum Program Internship, and with each working at a different clinical site, they offer unique perspectives to complex discussions in the classroom. They are able to make real contributions to the places in which they work and help these organizations and others function in the most effective ways possible,” Turko said.

“I AM SO INCREDIBLY HAPPY TO HAVE BEEN ABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN THESE INTERNSHIPS...I HAVE REALIZED THAT THIS MAY BE ANOTHER CAREER PATH.”

Marisa Rinaldi '17

Chad Gentry '17, a neuroscience major from Louisville, Ohio, began the Spectrum Program Internship thinking he wanted to focus on a career in sleep studies. But after completing a summer internship at the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism and working at GentleBrook in Hartville, Ohio, in the 2016 Fall Semester, his goals began to shift.

“My interest was in sleep research until I worked at the Cleveland Clinic and was introduced to autism studies. With the influence from internships, my career interests have shifted to working in the developmental disability field,” he said.

Gentry assists the clients at GentleBrook with daily activities and assorted craftsman projects, which can be anything from staining furniture to needlework. He also helps with research initiatives conducted with the individuals working at GentleBrook. These studies will help him and other employees better understand how to help those with developmental disabilities choose meaningful and appropriate career paths.

“GentleBrook focuses on giving all individuals with developmental disabilities a chance to work in the way they want and deserve to work, just like anyone else,” he said.

Emily Wolfe '16, a psychology major also from Louisville, Ohio, who graduates in December 2016, works with pre-school students at the Golden Key Center for Exceptional Children, an autism charter school in Canton, Ohio. The classroom in which Wolfe works has children with and without autism diagnoses working together. The classroom structure provides opportunities for intervention with the children with autism and allows them to work on fine motor skills, listening skills, and social development. Wolfe often assists in the motor skills center of the intervention classroom, allowing her one-on-one time with many of the children. She hopes to become a marriage and family therapist, so interacting with both children and their parents has been an invaluable experience.

“WITH THE INFLUENCE FROM INTERNSHIPS, MY CAREER INTERESTS HAVE SHIFTED TO WORKING IN THE DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITY FIELD.”

“Getting to see family dynamics in action has helped me learn that these families are like anyone else’s, but they sometimes need a little more patience and support than others,” Wolfe explained. “Being a senior gives me great flexibility with my schedule, so I am able to go out into the community and help others while earning credit. It’s so rewarding. Every time I see a child, even if it has only been a few minutes since I last saw them, they light up and run toward me for a big bear hug.”

A COMMUNITY-FOCUSED FUTURE

Students at Mount Union currently participate in several of Spectrum’s outreach initiatives on campus, including peer mentoring for individuals with developmental disabilities, a service that is desperately needed in the community. Turko plans to expand the peer-mentoring program in the spring of 2017.

“We have two undergraduates currently piloting the peer-mentoring program, both of whom are former Spectrum interns. They work with middle and high school students to help them develop academic and social skills,” Turko explained.

Emily Wolfe '16

In addition to the Spectrum Program Internship and peer-mentoring program, Turko offers a series of lunchtime lectures that are open to the community. Presentation topics include advocacy, culture, current issues, and research on developmental disabilities. The lectures have been a great success, and they will continue to be held every third Wednesday, January through April, in 2017.

“These lectures help support regional professional development for educators and clinicians, the people on the front lines of helping individuals with disabilities and their families,” Turko said.

SHAPING TOMORROW’S LEADERS

Although the three current interns in the Spectrum Education Center are all from Mount Union, Turko’s goal is for students from peer institutions to participate in the program as well. Students in the internship program will live on campus and work in the greater Alliance area. Each semester, the cohort members will learn from one another’s experiences while allowing them access to all the faculty, staff, and resources that Mount offers.

For current interns, their work has not only been about gaining insight into potential career paths and helping the community, but also about what the individuals with whom they work have taught them. Through the program, Rinaldi has been a part of major development projects, including the creation of curricula and the design of new physical spaces in which individuals with disabilities will work and learn at TWi.

“The most rewarding part of my job at both The Arc and TWi is knowing that I am making a difference in people’s lives,” she explained. “Working at The Arc, I have had the opportunity to really help out families that need guidance, and at TWi, I am able to give individuals with disabilities a chance to integrate into the community and actually have a say in what they want their lives to be.”

Gentry feels similarly about the time he has spent teaching and mentoring individuals at GentleBrook.

“The best part of this internship is putting smiles on the clients’ faces,” he explained. “There is nothing more rewarding than a client coming to you for advice and seeing them change their own lives.”

Wolfe hopes to start impacting the community after graduating this winter, and the experiences she has had as a Spectrum intern have only emboldened her mission and drive to accomplish her goals.

“I think that, most of all, this work has made me even more passionate about helping others,” Wolfe said. “Every day is an irreplaceable memory.”

The Spectrum Education Center has offered students and members of the community incredible opportunities, and with its continued success, its benefits will grow. As the program continues to expand, attract more students, and broaden its reach within the region, new groups of students will be able to change the lives of people in their communities. The Spectrum Education Center truly helps prepare students for fulfilling lives, meaningful work, and responsible citizenship. ■

Department of Psychology, Neuroscience, and Human Development Provides an Atmosphere for Diverse Learning

Human beings are incredibly complex. Understanding their thoughts, emotions, and behaviors is a challenging process. In the Department of Psychology, Neuroscience, and Human Development at the University of Mount Union, faculty members prepare students with some of the most diverse experiential opportunities that the field has to offer, allowing students to develop appropriate research skills while completing coursework and learning experiences that span across psychology's many sub-disciplines.

The department is home to three undergraduate majors: psychology, neuroscience, and human development and family science (HDFS). Covering a broad range of topics, each program brings its own distinct perspective to students who may come to the classroom with a limited understanding of what the field of psychology actually offers.

"Regardless of a student's selection between the three programs, each student is provided with a rich, varied set of coursework and experiences that will challenge them academically and prepare them for the real world," said Dr. Sarah Torok-Gerard, associate professor and chair of the Department of Psychology, Neuroscience, and Human Development.

The coursework within each major blends practical career and graduate work preparation with the liberal arts foundation that is a hallmark of Mount Union's rich academic tradition. Currently offering more than 40 unique courses, the curricula of the three majors represent both the breadth and depth of the field. Students can explore everything from understanding mental illness and the counseling process to nervous system influences on behavior, social and developmental processes, and human and animal cognition.

"What could be more interesting than learning why people think and do the things they do?" said Chelsea Black '17, a psychology major from Millersburg, Ohio. "I chose psychology as my major because it is a broad field that opens many doors to more specific career areas."

STIGMA-BUSTING LEADERSHIP

Movies and Madness, a course taught by Dr. Tamara Daily, professor of psychology, neuroscience, and human development who holds the Lewis Miller Professorship in Psychology, is always a sought-after choice for students regardless of major. The course focuses on how mental illness is portrayed in film and helps students understand the realities of how people, as well as their friends or family members, handle mental illnesses.

Daily, a social psychologist who has taught the class since 2004, tasks her students with creating “stigma-buster” projects to help raise awareness and break down stereotypes related to mental illness. Examples of past projects include radio and print public service announcements, posters, discussion groups, mental health screenings, and many other community education endeavors. The projects give students the opportunity to be actively engaged in Alliance and surrounding communities and the ability to be at the forefront of important conversations regarding mental health.

ANIMAL INSTINCTS

Daily also brings her horse to campus each year as an experiential exercise in the Learning and Conditioning class and Animal Cognition class taught by Dr. Melissa Muller, associate professor of psychology, neuroscience, and human development. The first-hand learning that Muller implements in her classes not only features horses, but dogs as well. Tearing a page out of the Pavlovian playbook, one of the skills that she teaches is clicker training in dogs of all breeds and ages. The students' own dogs are often those who come in to learn new tricks. Muller knows that the training is more impactful if students can take what they learn in the lab and apply it at home. The techniques of behavioral training are far more resonant and rewarding when a student's own canine companion learns right along with them.

Muller also facilitates bringing therapy dogs to campus each semester to help students manage the stress of final exams. Working with Therapy Dogs International, Muller provides students with a calm and cuddly presence that gives them a much needed breather during their most stressful days.

“MY FAVORITE EXPERIENCE IS BEING ABLE TO TAKE WHAT I’M LEARNING IN SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY AND OBSERVE IT IN OTHER PEOPLE.”

Bailey Grimm ’17

MAKING A REAL-WORLD IMPACT

Mount Union is doing its part to help contribute high-quality research to the field by studying current psychological and neuropsychological issues affecting our society. Students and faculty utilize a variety of laboratory suites for independent research and experiential learning, including a physiological and neuropsychological research lab, a social and counseling lab, and the new canine cognition lab. These facilities provide students with research experiences that they would not typically see until their master’s thesis projects. These experiences are not only beneficial for their résumés, but to the literature of the field.

Dr. Michael Knepp, associate professor of psychology, neuroscience, and human development, leads an undergraduate research team every semester. Students in his lab gain quality field experience by running multiple cardiovascular and neuropsychological studies. The interaction that Knepp is able to have with his students is pivotal because they are able to receive individual attention. Knepp and his students created many international conference presentations over the past five years and have been published in Psychological Reports, Laterality, and Perspectives on Psychological Science.

“At most schools, you would only get to create your own project as part of an honors thesis,” said Knepp. “These experiences help students with both their career and graduate school résumés by showing that they not only understand the material, but they can critically design projects and do the work in the field. At Mount Union, students are actively involved in subject running for my lab and also do most of the data quantification. That allows them to have a larger role in the publication process, both for conferences and research articles.”

In the neuroscience major, students also develop the research skills necessary for graduate and professional school through journal articles and laboratory experiences in the Neuroscience: The Brain and Neuroscience: Behaviors and Psychiatric Disorders courses.

Beyond these independent study laboratories, the heart of the department’s curriculum focuses on creating quality researchers. Muller and Dr. Kristine Turko, associate professor of psychology, neuroscience, and human development, teach a two-course research methods sequence that helps budding scientists develop during their sophomore and junior years. During their senior year, all psychology, neuroscience, and HDFS majors take part in a senior research project that spans the course of two semesters. Students work collaboratively under the mentorship of Daily and Turko to create their own studies, collect data, run results, and discuss their findings. These sequences provide students with a minimum of four semesters’ worth of practical skills and exposure to a depth of scientific inquiry not even found at most Research-1 institutions, which are universities in the United States that engage in extensive research activity.

“I enjoy watching students grow and move toward their goals,” Daily said. “This is especially true when I’m working with students on their senior research projects. Doing your own research as part of a team can be an anxiety-provoking and sometimes overwhelming process. Our job as faculty members is to shape and fade. We mold and tug and give loads of feedback. Then we back off and allow them more and more responsibility in the process. I love it when they start to take the reins and say, ‘I’ve got this.’”

DEVELOPMENT FOR THE FUTURE

Dr. Kevin Meyer, associate professor of psychology, neuroscience, and human development, focuses on experiential learning in the classes he teaches as part of the HDFS major. Formed in conjunction with the Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice, HDFS has proven attractive to students who want to learn how family, society, and culture impact an individual's development.

“My favorite experience is being able to take what I’m learning in social psychology and observe it in other people,” said Bailey Grimm ’17, an HDFS major from McMurray, Pennsylvania. “It will prepare me for the career into which I hope to go. Educational Psychology is my favorite class so far because I like learning about all the different teaching methods and the way we develop over the years.”

The student experience ultimately comes first for the faculty members in the department, a fact that becomes very clear when you walk into any one of Meyer’s classes. Students may take his Psychology of Humor course, which gives them the opportunity to try their hand at stand-up comedy while learning the research and psychological facets of humor. In the class, students explore how humor develops in childhood and how it can benefit an individual psychologically and physiologically. In his Marriage and Family Therapy course, students utilize the department’s counseling lab, playing the part of therapist in live-action role-plays, which is another opportunity typically not presented to students until graduate school.

Torok-Gerard’s seminar, The Origins of Psychology, has helped students prepare for the subject GRE in psychology by examining the history of the field. In her class, students conduct research at the Archives of the History of Psychology (AHAP), located at the neighboring University of Akron. This is a unique resource to which students have access, as they get to work with original correspondences, manuscripts, and published works created by the very psychologists they’ve learned about in their coursework. The end goal of the project is a historical autobiography of a selected theorist. While at AHAP, students also get a chance to visit the adjoining Center for the History of Psychology, which houses artifacts from infamous psychological experiments, like the shock generator used in psychologist Stanley Milgram’s studies on obedience.

Often when individuals think of psychology, their first thoughts may focus on the clinical realms of the field, but Mount Union provides students with a range of internship experiences at sites throughout the area. Students from all three majors have participated in summer internships at the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism over the past decade. Furthermore, Turko gives students the opportunity to participate in local internships through the Spectrum Education Center, of which she is also the director (see story on pages 10-13). The center focuses on helping individuals with autism. The student interns gain valuable knowledge about understanding those with autism and the continued advocacy surrounding the developmental disability field.

The experiences we have throughout life help shape who we are and who we might become. The faculty members of the Mount Union Department of Psychology, Neuroscience, and Human Development know they have limited time to mold the minds of their students. They know psychology and its various sub-disciplines are more complicated than a simple quiz question, and that making classroom content come to life in real-world settings is an indelible form of instruction. They know teaching is about taking risks, especially in a field where lack of innovation may put you behind. Preparing students for meaningful work in their careers is a commitment to which the department is passionately invested. ■

A WORLD OF SERVICE:

MOUNT UNION CELEBRATES THE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY TRIP'S 25TH YEAR

When Dr. Steve Kramer, semi-retired professor of psychology at the University of Mount Union, finished college, he decided to dedicate his first two years as a graduate teaching in Iraq.

"I had never left the United States before going to Baghdad," he said, smiling. "That experience changed the way I looked at so many different things – myself, the world, and the role of the United States. Now I've traveled to over 70 countries. I'm still trying to knock more off the list."

This first trip ignited a passion for travel and service in Kramer that led him to develop the Social Responsibility class at Mount Union 26 years ago. As a part of this class, students travel to countries like Haiti, Panama, Nicaragua, Guatemala, El Salvador, and others to learn the importance of public service. Kramer believes this encourages students to continue to give back when they return home, just as his first volunteering trip did for him.

On these trips, students often sleep in shared spaces, in homes throughout the community, and even outside. The students interact and talk with people about their experiences in the communities and country in which they live. Many of the projects Kramer and his students complete include infrastructure development and maintenance, such as digging latrines, constructing stoves, building homes, and more.

When Abby Honaker '11 had the opportunity to participate in the service trip during her senior year at Mount Union, she and her group visited El Salvador.

"It really opened my eyes," Honaker said. "After that experience, I knew I had to do something meaningful with my life. I had to give back."

Now when students visit various countries, Kramer get them involved in sustainability projects. Students better comprehend environmental impacts on these communities through their first-hand experiences on the trip. Through this work, Kramer has touched the lives of countless students, instructors, and individuals across a myriad of countries.

"I think it's important to show the students that we aren't just in this together as a country, but as a member of the world community. We need to be exploring our responsibility in addressing these issues," Kramer explained.

"When you think about the number of lives that Dr. Kramer has touched throughout his career – at Mount Union, in Alliance, and around the world – it's incredible, and it's inspiring," said Andrew Lattaner '01, who participated in the trip during his time at Mount. "He is a treasure, and I know that I am one of many who feel very fortunate to know him as a professor, mentor, and friend."

During this year's Alumni Weekend and Homecoming, the social responsibility trip gathered to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the program. Dozens of alumni who have attended the trip traveled from all over the country to meet again during the weekend festivities. Kramer has headed several alumni social responsibility trips over the years, which have been equally as popular as the student trips.

To alumni like Honaker and Lattaner, these experiences are not only unforgettable, but they also helped shape who they are today. Kramer continues to run this class despite his semi-retirement, and if it continues to touch lives, change minds, and inspire empathy and community engagement, it doesn't look like it will be stopping any time soon. ■

OFF THE GRID:

THE WILDERNESS TRIP CELEBRATES ITS 41ST YEAR

This year marks the 41st anniversary of the Wilderness Trip and associated class, an experience many students and alumni hold near and dear to their hearts. When Dr. Steve Kramer, semi-retired professor of psychology, first developed the trip in 1976, it focused heavily on how groups function within specific contexts and how students could apply the real-life experiences they encounter to their work in the classroom. Most importantly, Kramer wanted to provide his students with situations that would challenge them.

“I think we all need ‘stretching’ experiences, things that take us out of our comfort zones,” he explained. “These experiences challenge us and strengthen our courage in ways that simply reading and discussing these ideas cannot.”

The trip always takes place in early to mid-August so that students can apply what they learned on the trip to their work in the classroom during the fall semester. Before the trip, they meet on Mount’s campus to engage in a variety of team-building activities. Students learn to rock climb, master a ropes course, and perform other group exercises that are designed to develop connections and get them working together effectively before they ever leave Ohio.

The 10-day trip in the Adirondack Mountains primarily consists of hiking, but also incorporates rock climbing, swimming, canoeing, and service projects. Students work with park rangers to repair trails, bridges, dams, and outhouses.

Amy (Hutchman ’89) Miller, who majored in biology, has experienced the trip as a student and an alumni group leader. She minored in education and is now teaching at Alliance High School.

“Through the Wilderness Trip and Steve Kramer, I learned life is not about the busy-ness, but rather, the quietness,” Miller said. “Only when you strip away the distractions of life can you listen to your inner self, reflect, and learn.”

Since Kramer’s partial retirement in 2009, Dr. Paul Tidman, professor of philosophy and religious studies at Mount Union, has taken over the course and trip. As a result, the focus of both the class and trip have shifted from group dynamics to environmental ethics.

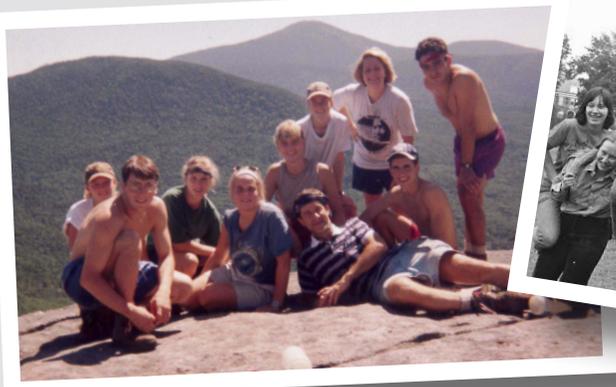

“Studying environmental ethics is about looking beyond human beings and focusing on our obligations to the other living beings with which we share the planet,” he said.

Tidman stresses the importance of the preservation and ethical treatment of the natural world and encourages his students to notice the effects that climate change has had on the environments in which they travel. At the end of his course, students write an essay that pulls together their real-life experiences and the theory they study in the classroom.

Tidman’s first trip with students in 2010 included just a handful of individuals. Now, the program gets more applicants than Tidman can take.

“Many students, when the trip is over, tell me that it has been the best thing they’ve ever done, not only at Mount, but in their lives,” Tidman said. “It’s very rewarding to be a part of that.”

As the Wilderness Trip enters another decade, it remains as popular as ever. Kramer hopes that the experience will continue to inspire students and alumni alike. With the level of interest it continues to garner on campus and beyond, the tradition of the trip should be able to continue far into the future. ■

How Caitie Shimp '17 is Preparing for Post-Grad Success

{BY KRISTIN WERSTLER '18}

Caitie Shimp '17

Hartville, Ohio

B.S., Psychology

University of Mount Union

“The mentors in the organization [BSU] helped me develop as a leader. I know that the BSU is the key piece that made my experience at Mount Union a memorable one.”

- Caitie Shimp '17

For Caitie Shimp '17, the decision to major in psychology was a no-brainer. A self-described people person, Shimp knew the field of psychology was one in which she would thrive.

“In high school, I took an Advanced Placement Psychology course, and it just clicked,” Shimp explained. “At Mount Union, I began to realize all the things you could do with a psychology degree. I could go into counseling, work in communications, or explore a career in business. I know I’m going to be dealing with people in my career, so what’s better than getting to know the mind behind the person before working with them?”

Despite her friendly nature and draw to psychology, Shimp worried she wouldn’t find her place on campus, but she quickly found her niche in the Black Student Union (BSU).

“Where I grew up, I was one of two black people in my entire school, so joining BSU was a big step for me,” Shimp said. “It truly helped me find a part of myself that I didn’t know I had. The mentors in the organization helped me develop as a leader. I know that the BSU is the key piece that made my experience at Mount Union a memorable one.”

If Shimp could share one piece of advice with fellow and future students, she’d tell them to get involved in a variety of activities – not just ones that fit their personalities, but organizations that shape and educate.

“I really encourage people to not just stick with what they know,” said Shimp. “Once I was comfortable with BSU, it would’ve been really easy for me to stop searching for other opportunities, but I’m glad I didn’t limit my college experience.”

Shimp became the political action chair of BSU, president of Student Senate, student coordinator for the Together Initiating Excellence Program, and a Preview and Raider guide coordinator. Needless to say, the ever-busy senior has her work cut out for her. Still, Shimp explains that her enthusiasm for both her classes and campus involvement make the work enjoyable.

Shimp has refined her skills in the field through two internships. These opportunities gave her the chance to apply what she learned in the classroom in a professional work environment, learn new job skills, discover the areas in which she is able to thrive, and identify those that do not fit her as well.

Her first internship was with the Mount Union Office of Counseling Services.

“For the longest time, I thought I would be a counselor,” Shimp recalled. “After my internship, I realized how much goes into counseling, and I had to really reflect on my own personal well-being. I have the tendency to be there for other people, but forget about myself. This internship was a really great eye-opening experience that made me realize I want the same type of interaction that comes from working with and consoling students, but I don’t necessarily want to be a counselor.”

Her second internship was with the Office of Alcohol, Drug, and Wellness Education at Mount Union. It was through this experience that Shimp started to hone in on what she wanted to do with her degree.

“It was great to see another application of counseling in a student affairs setting,” she said. “I developed a love for student affairs through this internship and all my other leadership roles, and I realized it is the atmosphere in which I want to work. I can still console, counsel, and work with students, but it’s not all that I would do. I feel that both of these internships made me realize what I like from both areas in the field and found that student affairs is the role that gives me the best of both.”

As a senior, Shimp is beginning to search for her next step in achieving her career goals and trying to answer the question, “What am I going to do after Mount Union?”

“I wonder that every day,” Shimp laughed. “I’m actually in the process of applying for graduate school right now, so fingers crossed that goes well. I’m looking at a program that focuses on college as a community.”

According to Shimp, this program seems to be a great place to foster her passions and continue to develop her skills in the field of psychology.

“I’m all about making sure the overall experience for students turns out as they hoped,” Shimp explained. “You’re not going to make every person happy, but I want to encourage college campuses to listen to students and recognize that sometimes pushing boundaries is what we need in our world.” ■

Autumn Kaufman '03

Director of Partnerships, BCBA, LBA,
Commonwealth Autism

B.S., Psychology and B.A., Art,
University of Mount Union

M.S., Behavioral Analysis and Therapy,
Southern Illinois University-Carbondale

I work for a non-profit organization that forms collaborative partnerships with schools and community service providers across Virginia. I work with our partners to assess their needs and formulate a strategic plan to implement evidence-based practices for individuals with disabilities.

My Favorite Thing

I like that I have the flexibility of working with many partners with different needs – each day is unique and I love the variety! I am passionate about my organization's mission and feel fulfilled that my work changing large scale systems will impact the lives of many people.

It's All About Who You Know

Each professor I worked with was instrumental in shaping my career path. Dr. Steve Kramer provided an extra credit opportunity with a local family and the Cleveland Clinic, which shaped the profession I chose. Dr. Jeri Thompson introduced me to child psychology, and Dr. Tamara Daily ignited my passion for research as she guided my SCE group. Dr. Tim Smith was the catalyst behind my decision to attend graduate school and was a huge source of support throughout my time at Mount Union and to this day. Professor Keith McMahon was my academic advisor and encouraged a holistic approach to my double major. Professor Tim Hallaran encouraged a core group of us to form a solid community that supported one another. Professor Joel Collins encouraged me to explore new ideas and themes within my artwork and life by following my instincts and pushing my own boundaries and was always a source of support. Professor Jim Hopper laid a systematic and disciplined design framework for me to grow as an artist.

Outside-the-Classroom Learning

I worked for two semesters as a tutor for America Reads. Through Dr. Kramer, I was able to work as an in-home applied behavior analysis therapist as part of the outreach services provided by the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism. I also worked a few semesters as an assistant to the faculty in the Department of Art, thanks to Professor Collins.

Career Preparation

While attending Mount Union, I was often working two or three jobs. To be able to also pull off a double major while doing this required intensive dedication, focus, and pressure to meet deadlines. I developed a very strong work ethic that has carried over to this day. The experiences and relationships that were a part of the Group Dynamics course and the Personal Growth and Adjustment course taught me valuable lessons that I often reflect upon. The honesty and openness of the weekly critiques as an art major prepared me to give and receive honest feedback.

Return on Investment

The experiences I had and the lasting network of colleagues and friends that I gained are priceless!

Kristopher Claros '10

Outpatient Therapeutic Therapist/
Group Facilitator, MilleNium Clinic
and Chrysalis Health

B.S., Psychology, University of Mount Union

*M.S., Addiction Counseling, Grand Canyon
University*

My primary goal as a counselor is to assist my clients with re-entry and participation in every aspect of normal life. My secondary goal is to help them achieve and maintain abstinence from addictive chemicals and behaviors and to provide mental health counseling to children, adolescents, and/or families.

The Difference Purple Can Make

Compared to other universities, Mount Union's difference was in the community – everyone knew one another. The school felt more personal, and the professors and administrators knew you both on and off campus. People who live in Alliance would see me with any kind of purple on and would always shout, "Go Raiders!" It made me feel like I was serving a purpose.

Too Many to Choose

Honestly, I have a few favorite professors. If I have to pick one, I would choose Dr. Kristine Turko. I loved the experiments we did in the course and the energy she brought to the classroom. Even when I was tired, I really enjoyed coming to that class, and she was very helpful.

The Entire Experience Makes the Whole

I was on the football and track and field teams, and I worked with the Dowling Mentor Program*. The program really helped me decide that I wanted to help others help themselves. I'm actually still in contact with my mentee to this day.

The Dowling Mentor Program pairs Mount Union student mentors with middle and high school students in the Alliance area.*

Life After Mount Union

Following graduation, I pursued a master's degree in addiction counseling at Grand Canyon University. My education at Mount Union has prepared me for my career because I was able to explore different areas of study and become a more well-rounded thinker. I work with individuals who deal with the universal issues of drugs and mental illness. I am motivated to help not only those in my community, but those throughout the country.

Staying Connected

I still keep in touch with friends from Mount even more than friends in my hometown. I love them dearly. We talk every other day if not everyday. I also still talk to some staff members and professors on social media.

A Proven Investment

My Mount Union education has been a great investment for me because of the professional networking. In addition, I have been exposed to, been able to learn from, and understand other cultures and walks of life.

Kristen (Vazzano '97) Zurbuch

School Counselor, Plain Local School District

B.S., Psychology, University of Mount Union
M.A., Counseling and Human Development,
Walsh University
Ed.S., School Counseling, Kent State University

I am a school counselor at GlenOak High School in the Plain Local School District in Canton, Ohio. In my role as school counselor, I am responsible for a caseload of approximately 380 students in grades 10-12. As such, I attend to the personal, academic, and college and career readiness domains of a student's life at school.

Love at First Sight

I fell in love with Mount's campus when I visited as a junior in high school and didn't look back. It was the perfect fit from the start! The friendly, supportive environment was a must for me, and the college provided a nice selection of majors from which to choose. This was also important because my major was "undecided" when I entered as a freshman.

Traditions that Support Growth

Mount Union is different from other colleges for me because of the right blend of "old" and "new." I love the time-honored traditions passed down from generation to generation at Mount Union, but also appreciate the University's eye toward progress and the future.

First Steps After Graduation

I entered graduate school directly after graduating from Mount Union, but worked concurrently as a job specialist for the Jobs for Ohio's Graduates program at Lake High School in Uniontown, Ohio. In this role, I developed and monitored the job readiness skills of at-risk teens in high school. After that, I was an admission representative at Mount Union for three years, and then was hired at Kent State University as an assistant director of admissions.

Lessons Beyond the Classroom

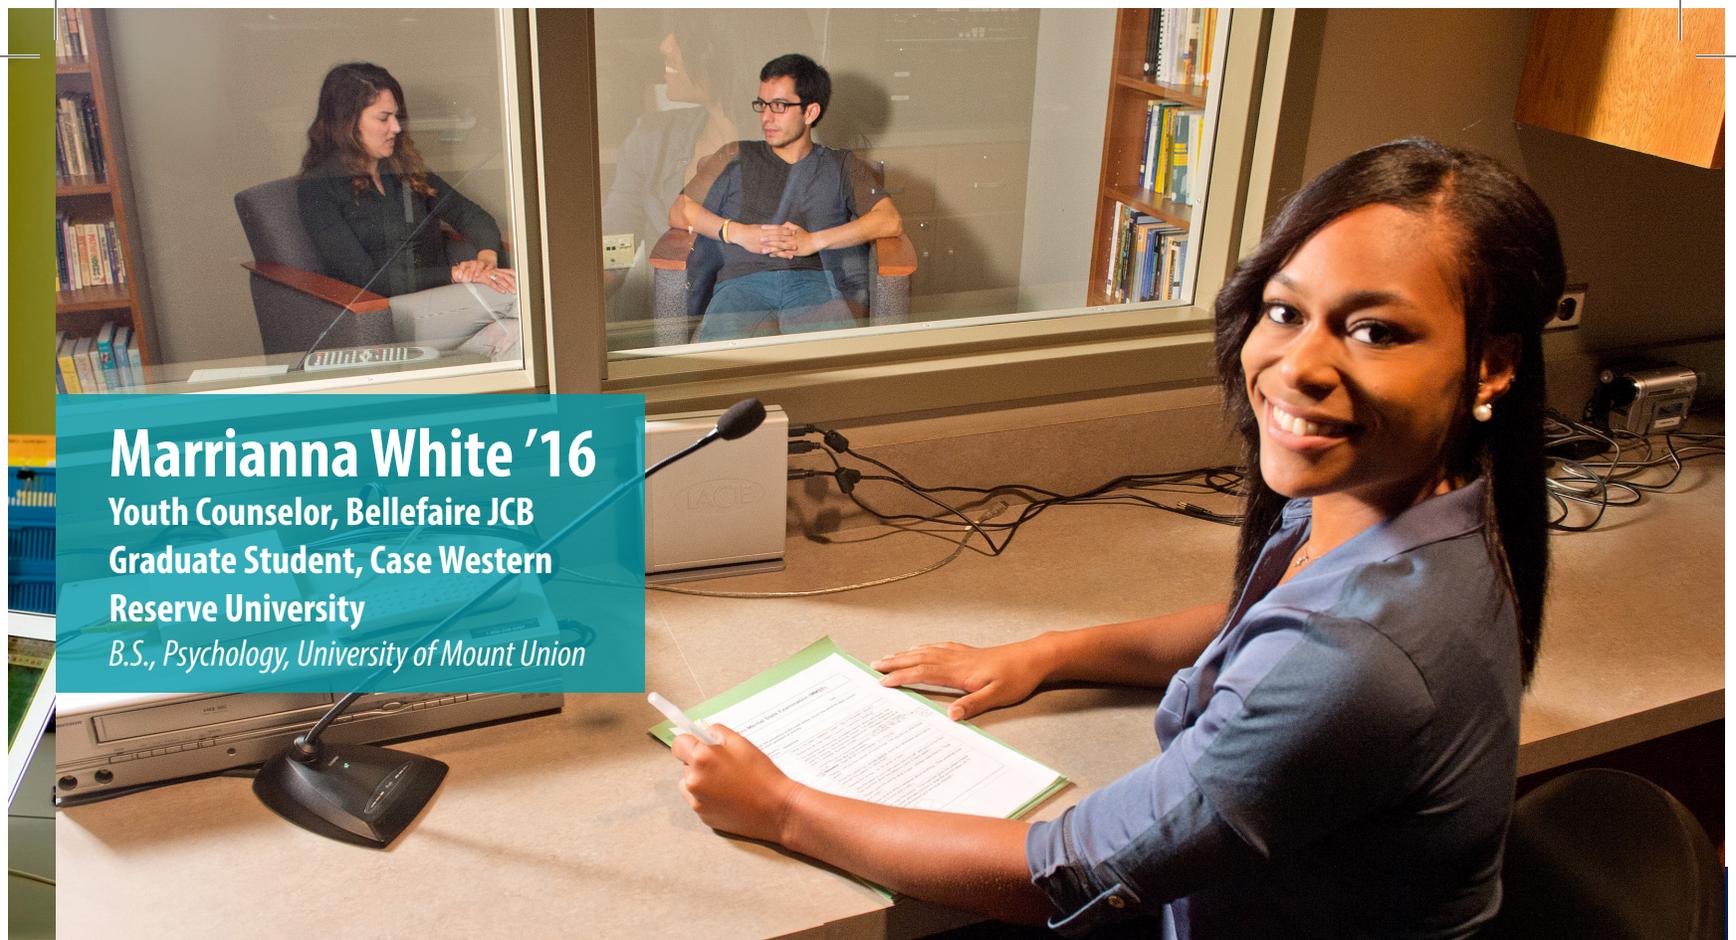

Upon graduating from Mount Union, I was very prepared for the rigor of graduate work, which I appreciated. But aside from what I learned in the classroom, I developed a sense of confidence and a level of comfort in establishing relationships with new people. I also learned how to lead, communicate, and organize, which are huge assets in the career world no matter what the job.

Connections That Last

I consider the people I met at Mount lifelong friends. Months and years can go by, but in an instant, we reconnect like we did when we were freshmen on the first floor of King Hall or suite-mates in Hoiles-Peterson. I return to campus annually to speak to the Professional Development class about my career path as a former psychology major, and I share my stories about when I was a student. I have also attended Schooler Lectures and sporting events as an alumna.

Learning to Think Critically

The liberal arts education offered at Mount Union teaches you to view life from multiple perspectives. Rarely in life are things "black and white," and the ability to view situations through multiple lenses has helped me throughout my career.

Marrianna White '16

Youth Counselor, Bellefaire JCB
Graduate Student, Case Western Reserve University

B.S., Psychology, University of Mount Union

At Bellefaire JCB, I work with children on the autism spectrum and provide them aid with regard to their daily living activities. I am responsible for, on average, two to three clients on a daily basis to make sure they are properly taken care of and able to complete "household" tasks. I am also pursuing a master's degree in social work at Case Western Reserve University.

A Place I Want to Be

Essentially, track was the main reason I decided to go to Mount, but as soon as I visited the campus, I fell in love and immediately knew that was where I wanted to be. Mount Union's community is extremely warm and comfortable. Also, the team spirit at Mount is like no other!

Internship Opportunity

I interned with the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism the summer following my sophomore year, a position that Dr. Turko assisted me in securing. It has opened up many, many doors for me ever since! I worked one-on-one with children with autism on a daily basis while interning at the Cleveland Clinic.

Getting Involved

I was on the track and field team and a member of the Psychology Club all four years. I became president during my senior year.

How Mount Makes a Difference

I think the combination of a liberal arts education and professional preparation makes for a versatile student who can bring a lot of different things to the table.

Professors Who Stand Out

Dr. Kevin Meyer was probably the professor that I most enjoyed in class because his Child Psychopathology class was one of my absolute favorites! He made classes very enjoyable.

Career Goals

I am currently pursuing a master's degree in social work at Case Western Reserve University. The education and overall experience I received at Mount Union prepared me for my career in more ways than I could ever explain. My internship at the Cleveland Clinic was so helpful and changed me forever. I also learned so much about myself and am the person I am today because of my Mount experience.

Bleed Purple

I just graduated last year, but I am still extremely close with all my Raiders! I still visit campus as much as I can, and I plan on donating to the M Club annually as a way of giving back to the athletic program that gave me so much. I wouldn't be the person I am today had I not participated in track and field during my four years at Mount Union.

Scott Berkeley '80, Phil Francis '80, Brian McCormick '80, Kevin Edwards '79, and Jeff Schulz '79 met with Marilyn Middleton recently. Marilyn was the cook at Beta Iota for 26 years (1966-1992). She was a friend, confidant, and mother while these alumni were students at Mount Union. She celebrated her 86th birthday on June 26. She still lives in Alliance and enjoys playing cards, volunteering at the hospital, and spending time with her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. Marilyn brought memorabilia from her Sigma Nu days for the group to enjoy.

ASSOCIATION MESSAGE

As part of the 18,000 plus alumni of our great University, I personally want to thank you for all that you do as part of the Mount Union family. Your efforts to come back and visit, participate in events (concerts, sporting events, etc.), and diligently and generously provide financial support to the University are equally appreciated.

The University has invested a significant amount of dollars in the infrastructure of the campus over the years, resulting in a campus that is second to none. Much of this was accomplished with the generous financial donations of alumni and friends of the University. Mount's extraordinary efforts to control student costs have resulted in Mount being one of the best overall education values amongst our sister schools, as well as universities and colleges across the country. Regardless, the challenges of the economy in the past few years have made it difficult for those families sending their child/children for undergraduate and graduate degrees.

Let your fond memories and successes that were nurtured here on campus be an inspiration to begin and/or sustain support for the current and future generations of students. How rewarding it is to help others have the same privilege that you were given! Thank you for being part of the Mount Union family in so many ways.

Mount Union Alumni Take Center Stage

Antonietta “Toni” Collins ’07 provided a guest voice for the Disney animated series Elena of Avalor for its Día de los Muertos episode in October. Collins is already a member of the Walt Disney family of networks, as she frequently anchors ESPN’s flagship show SportsCenter weekdays from 10 a.m.-1 p.m.

Carrie Coon ’03 has been cast as the female lead, Gloria Burgle, in the third season of FX’s critically-acclaimed TV series, “Fargo.” Coon is also known for her work with HBO’s “The Leftovers” in which she plays Nora Durst. She was nominated for the 2015 Critics’ Choice Award for Best Actress in a Drama Series for this role. She also appeared on the silver screen in the major motion picture “Gone Girl.”

Washington Redskins wide receiver Pierre Garçon ’08 caught his 500th reception in the NFL against the Cleveland Browns on Sunday, October 2 in Washington, DC. Garçon is one of only 14 active and one of 131 all-time NFL players to achieve this milestone per Pro Football Reference. He has also been nominated for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year award, which recognizes an NFL player for his excellence on and off the field.

Nancy Hill ’79, CEO of the American Association of Advertising Agencies (4A’s), was recognized by the 3 Percent Conference, which named an award in her honor. Founded by Kat Gordon, the 3 Percent Conference helps women get into more creative leadership roles. The award was named after Hill as a result of her work at the 4A’s and her dedication to helping women move forward in their careers as a means of creating a more diverse and humanistic workforce. In 2017, Hill will be stepping down from her current role with the 4A’s after nine years. During her tenure in this role, she modernized the 4A’s operations, providing guidance to the agency community on transformative issues and passionately advocating for gender and diversity initiatives throughout the industry. Following her departure, she will focus on consulting and will spend time in Ecuador volunteering and teaching.

Eduardo Valdes ’83 celebrated his 600th musical performance for the New York Metropolitan Opera on November 26. Valdes’ performance was in the critically acclaimed Aida, a four-act opera by Giuseppe Verdi that takes place in Egypt. Valdes had already achieved a lifetime goal of becoming a musician and performing for one of the most renowned opera houses in the world.

Honor Roll of Investors 2015-2016

Dear Alumni and Friends,

I would like to extend my sincere appreciation to our thoughtful investors whose gifts made the 2015-2016 Fiscal Year a success. Through the Honor Roll of Investors, it is my pleasure to present the alumni, friends, and corporate and foundation partners who supported the University of Mount Union from July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016. We are truly grateful for the generous support in areas such as student scholarships, academic program support for classroom learning, and hands-on preparation, as well as facility expansion and campus improvements.

At the October Board meeting, the Board of Trustees voted to approve a new strategic plan for Mount Union to help propel the University into the future. Through the efforts of the Strategic Planning Steering Committee, three critical components were identified that will be the driving forces of our next plan – affordability, quality, and leadership. These are fundamental to the framework of the strategic plan will be our focus over the next five years.

This plan, along with a fundraising campaign that's on the horizon, will provide the University with a road map that will transform the college experience for future generations. The campus community is working collaboratively and diligently to provide opportunities to enhance innovation, growth, and continued excellence. The campaign initiatives will focus closely on Mount Union's emphasis on preparing and graduating leaders and the importance of continuing to educate a significant percentage of first generation college students.

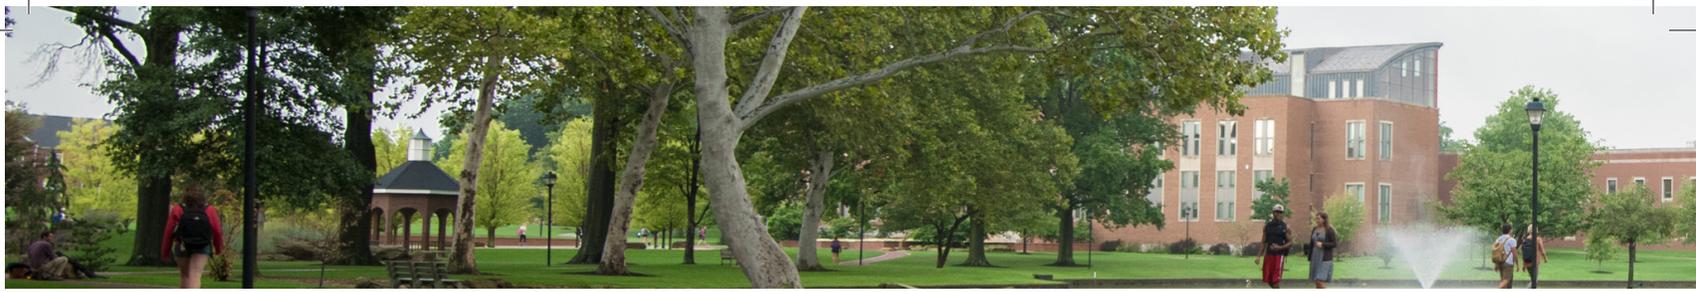

As we look to the future, we are working hard to make the University of Mount Union even stronger. However, the thriving Mount Union of today has only been accomplished through the foundation that has been set by the generosity of our past supporters. Mount Union would not have such successes without the continued loyalty and commitment of our faithful donors. Please accept my sincere gratitude for your support and encouragement.

Sincerely,

Gregory L. King '89

Endowed Funds

Endowments are permanent funds that provide support for academic pursuits and programs at the University of Mount Union. Private gifts to the University create these endowments. Donors determine the purpose for which endowment income may be spent. Some common purposes include the following.

- Chairs, professorships, and other faculty and staff positions
- Scholarships and prizes
- Support for an academic program of the University, department, building, or area
- Academic research
- Purchase of journals, books, art, technology, or new equipment

Since its inception in 1846, thousands of donors have contributed to endowment funds established for hundreds of purposes at Mount Union. Generous support for higher education, coupled with conservative and effective investment strategies, has resulted in an endowment currently valued at $132 million (as of June 30, 2016).

The Mount Union Fund

Each year, generous alumni, friends, parents, and organizations support campus programs and initiatives through gifts to The Mount Union Fund. These gifts support the current operations of the University by providing needed and flexible funds used to assist student aid, enhance campus technology, support campus improvement projects, and address emerging opportunities. Simply put, the University would not be in the position it is in today without a strong and growing tradition of annual support. Those who support The Mount Union Fund do more than just share their resources or receive a tax benefit, they show their belief in the University, its faculty and students, its mission, and its direction. Mount Union is indeed grateful for the 2,500 donors to The Mount Union Fund.

1846 Society

The 1846 Society is the pinnacle of annual giving recognition. Membership in the 1846 Society is achieved by donors who contribute $1,250 or more to the Mount Union Fund during the fiscal year (July 1-June 30). The following donors, through their annual support, make a collective statement that their belief in the University of Mount Union is strong and that the University is indeed a priority in their philanthropic lives. The University salutes the following individuals who made a significant difference during 2015-2016.

JEWEL MCCOLUMN '17

"I want to take the time to extend my sincere sense of gratitude and thanks for your willingness and generosity to support a scholarship fund that has aided in my success here at Mount Union. My education is very important to me, and it is something that I will never take for granted. My only hope is to one day pay it forward to those that will also one day be pursuing a collegiate education."

Each * represents 10 or more years of giving. Each + represents increased giving. Each ^ denotes deceased. Each (M) represents Forever Mount Society.

Volunteers

The spirit of giving at Mount Union does not end with financial support. Many volunteer their time and talents through several avenues of engagement. Alumni can choose to engage more fully in the life and success of the University by participating on the Alumni Association Executive Board. In addition, some alumni and friends choose to give their time as members of the Board of Trustees, Engineering Advisory Council, Executives and Professionals on Campus, Physician Assistant Advisory Council, The Ralph and Mary Regula Center for Public Service and Civic Engagement Advisory Council, and the Sport Business Advisory Council.

Alumni Association Executive Board

The purpose of the Alumni Association Executive Board is to be actively engaged in activities that promote and provide leadership in support of the University.

Board of Trustees

Members of the Mount Union Board of Trustees serve in a policy-making role, but more importantly they provide financial support and management, represent the University to the public, assure the maintenance of the physical plant, serve as a court of final appeal, assess the institution's performance, and have administrative accountability for the Office of the President.

Dr. Jennifer Stevens '89 and Gunnar Maher '19

Jennifer Stevens '89 and her son, Gunnar Maher '19, have always thought of Mount Union as home. Gunnar grew up visiting campus as a Mount Union sports fan. It was Jennifer's dream for her son to attend Mount and share in the same wonderful experiences as she did. She is now thrilled that Gunnar chose to join the Mount Union family.

As a student, Jennifer was a sister of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority, participated in the Wilderness Trip, and was a collegiate athlete on the women's cross country and the women's indoor and outdoor track and field teams.

"Mount Union totally shaped me," said Jennifer. "I felt well-prepared and excited to enter into the world after college."

After graduation, Jennifer continued her education, earning a Doctor of Podiatric Medicine degree. She and her husband, Rob Maher, now own Western Ohio Podiatric Medical Center Inc., a private practice in Greenville, Ohio.

As a proud alumna and parent of a current student, Jennifer chooses to give back. She and her family have been supporters of the Mount Union Fund for more than 25 years and are members of the 1846 Society.

"Mount Union is my school, and I am proud to be a graduate," said Jennifer. "It revives me each time I come to campus, and it reminds me of why I choose to be a supporter."

Watching Gunnar as a current student at Mount Union, Jennifer notices the same school spirit, camaraderie, friendly and inclusive campus, and close interactions with faculty and staff that she experienced while attending Mount. Gunnar is in his second year at Mount Union and majors in mechanical engineering and Spanish. Outside of class, Gunnar is a member of the Sigma Nu fraternity and currently serves as the fundraising chair.

"I love seeing Gunnar thrive, grow, and become more independent in the positive environment at Mount Union," said Jennifer.

Being involved at Mount Union is very important to their family. As parent and student, they both feel the same positive energy and excitement on campus.

"I see Mount Union evolving in a good way, and I want to be a part of that," said Jennifer. "I was very fortunate to be a recipient of scholarships and grant money and am very grateful for that. I choose to invest in the future of the University and want to help students grow and enjoy their college experience as much as I did."

RAIDERS RECRUITING RAIDERS

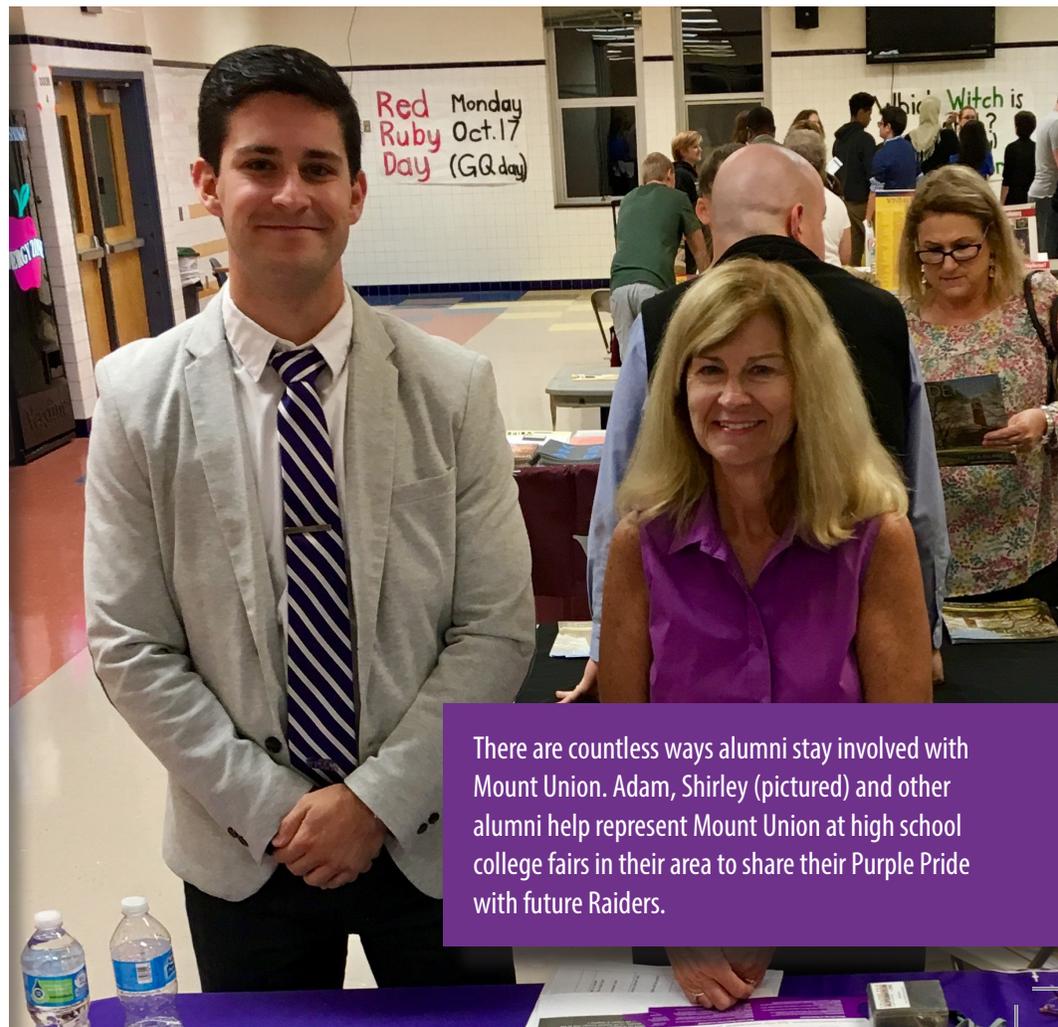

"Recognizing the role Mount Union has played in my personal and professional life, it's rewarding to support the University's recruitment efforts as a college fair alumni representative in the Washington, DC area."

- Adam Hoyt '10

"I enjoyed speaking with prospective students and discussing the outstanding experience provided by Mount Union. Although Mount Union has evolved and campus has exploded with new facilities, the unique college experience offered remains the same."

- Shirley (Schwartz '77) Klocek

Contact Eric Young at younger@mountunion.edu or (330) 829-8238 if you are interested in learning how you can recruit future Purple Raiders.

There are countless ways alumni stay involved with Mount Union. Adam, Shirley (pictured) and other alumni help represent Mount Union at high school college fairs in their area to share their Purple Pride with future Raiders.
